NON-PLAYER CHARACTERS

The following NPCs represent a selection of characters the gamemaster may find useful when running Eclipse Phase adventures. Bonuses from implants and other gear are incorporated into aptitude scores. Gamemasters are encouraged to modify the listed stats, skills, gear, etc. as they deem fit.

AGI POD WORKER

“At least I don’t have to stay cooped up inside all day.”

AGIs are often employed to operate maintenance pods on habitats and orbital installations as they can work around the clock and provide a set of intelligent eyes on the exterior, where spimes and surveillance systems are isolated and subject to failure. They are preferred over standard narrow AIs due to their elevated intelligence and adaptability. Novacrabs are particularly popular sleeves due to their extra mobility and durability.

ANARCHIST SABOTEUR

“4 ... 3 ... 2 ...”

Some anarchists are not content to just live the outer system libertarian lifestyle. They want to bring the revolution to the inner system, strike at the heart of the capitalist beast, and liberate the oppressed clanking masses. These anarchists work in decentralized cells to sabotage hypercorp operations, government facilities, and military units. These attacks typically target physical infrastructure and property and avoid loss of life—the goal is to raise the costs of business and support social struggles, not cause indiscriminate terror.

Some missions are so challenging that the saboteur is certain to be caught or killed. In cases like this, anarcho-sabs send a suicide beta fork.

ARMS DEALER

“That’s an original 3rd EU Cavalry battlesuit from BF 10. Don’t touch it.”

The arms dealer isn’t your standard low-level street dealer, nor are they working for a particular gang or syndicate. They are an independent operator, often with connections to multiple criminal organizations, not to mention influential government, military, and hypercorp personnel. As the head of their own private cartel, they are relaxed and confident in their personal skills, network connections, and the stopping power of their inventory. They are all business, however, and would rather walk away from a deal than draw weapons. Arms dealers are almost always accompanied by a bodyguard and at least two well-equipped criminal enforcers, just so no one gets any ideas.

ASSASSIN

“Shbbbbbh.”

Though death is often just a temporary setback, elite assassins still play a role in the upper levels of crime and power. The assassin’s mission may be to send a message, kidnAP an ego, or erase a memory before it is backed up. The most capable assassins get close enough to their targets to pop their stacks or disappear their targets entirely; missing people whose deaths are not confirmed may not be resleeved from backup for months, depending on their insurance provisions. The best killers leave no trace and protect their own egos with dead switches.

VARIANT: EGO KILLER

On rare occasions, assassins may be tasked to hunt down an AI, infomorph, or fork. In these cases, a killer with a skill set oriented towards hacking is called for. Truly elite ego killers specialize in accessing secure backup services and deleting archived backups. It is rumored that some ego killers got their start in military networks during the Fall, hunting down remnants of the TITANS.

ASVNC

“Don’t be disappointed, it takes a lot to surprise me.”

Those infected with the Watts-McLeod strain of the Exsurgent virus manifest strange abilities and are constantly aware of something fundamentally different in their ego. Fear of the strangeness in their own minds and the potential aggression that others might show them forces asvncs to learn skills to blend in with others and keep their true nature masked. Some asvncs view the “otherness” of their abilities as something to master before it masters them.

BIOCONSERVATIVE TERRORIST

“We’ve been cast from Eden for using forbidden knowledge and now we suffer in the wasteland.”

Infrequent terror attacks still occur across the solar system, often committed by bioconservative groups dedicated to destroying the “taint” of techno-industrial memes and society. Some bioconservatives arise from religious cults that view transhuman technologies as opposing the natural order, such as extreme Pentacostal religious sects who saw the Fall as the Rapture: divine retribution for the growth of genefixing, the creation of “soulless” AIs, and similar abominations. Others adhere to anti-tech or even anti-civilization ideologies, such as the primitivists who seek to restore humanity to an idyllic hunter-gatherer state.

BODYGUARD

“Get behind me.”

Bodyguards can be found guarding XP stars, the families and current extramarital relations of hypercorp and political figures, and mid- to high-level crime bosses. Thanks to regular backups, they’re more than willing to literally put their lives on the line. Some bodyguards even sleeve into body doubles of those they’re protecting to spring a trAP on would-be eggnappers and assassins.

BRINKER ISOLATE

“Leave me alone.”

Far-flung habitats and outposts are populated by isolates eking out a meager living according to their own rules, religious beliefs, and social conventions. The isolation and hardship they live under forces them to develop survival skills, and such brinkers can be surprisingly tenacious when defending what’s theirs.

BUG COLLECTOR

“Now where did you just scurry off to ... ?”

Bug collectors are fascinated with the variety and complexity of nanomachines and nanofabrication and can talk about these topics endlessly. To these boffins, molecular manufacturing is an art form as well as a science, and they take particular pleasure in analyzing new blueprint designs and nanobot concepts—not to mention TITAN nano-relics. The dangers posed by nanotechnology make it necessary for security forces and militaries to incorporate bug collectors in their organizations in advisory capacities.

Some nano-experts specialize in systems used for (counter-)surveillance and/or work with deployed security squads to analyze and counter nanoswarms used by criminals and other threats.

Additional Skills: Profession: Security Ops 55

Additional Gear: Covert Ops Tool, Nanoswarms (Scouts and Taggants), Smart Dust

COVERT OPS

“No one saw me get in, no one will see you die.”

Though covert ops agents have many toys at their disposal, they rely on physical capabilities. Given the focus placed on electronic information security to safeguard secrets, there has been a resurgence of flesh-and-blood field operatives that can bypass physical security to get at people and places directly. Even if a system can't be hacked, the physical hardware could be destroyed or the engineers involved could be ego-napped and the relevant information plucked from their minds through torture and psychosurgery. Covert ops agents may work alone in the field, but they're usually linked to some organization that gives them purpose and support. If anyone is even aware that a covert ops agent has come after them, they know that a powerful opponent has them in their sights.

CRIMINAL ENFORCER

"You should be careful, that sleeve you're wearing doesn't take repeated blows to the head very well."

Enforcers are simply employed thugs. Their skill sets lean towards the violent arts of persuasion, but the experts know how to handle themselves in delicate negotiations and social situations or get what they want with the proper menacing look or choice of words rather than drawing weapons.

GANG MEMBER

"Fou-toi, chienne."

In the poverty-stricken communities of Luna, Mars, and the inner system, gangs engaging in black market capitalism provide a safety net and support network for the desperate and dangerous. Often still clinging to pre-Fall ethnic and cultural affiliations, many gangs adhere to a tribal identity with reinforced customs and rituals. Rarely found in groups of less than three, gang toughs rely on surprise and overwhelming numbers in a fight.

HOPLITE INFANTRY

“You have 5 seconds to lay down arms and surrender.”

HOPLITE (High Offense Piloted Local Insertion Tactical Exoframe) mechanized infantry was ubiquitous among many pre-Fall military organizations due to the firepower, tactical flexibility, and profound impact on enemy these battlesuits provided. During the Fall they were prized as one of the few military hardware units not relying on AI. Post-Fall, they are deployed in major military raids, habitat assaults, and field actions against lingering TITAN threats. Some valued military installations and research facilities employ them for defense.

HOTSHOT PILOT

“High-g turns let you know you’re alive.”

Many uplifted parrots and ravens have found employment as pilots. Their natural bent towards three dimensional thinking and the brain physiology of neo-avian sleeves, which enhance spatial awareness and support instinctive flight capabilities, make them some of the best pilots alive. Watching a wing of neo-avian pilots react to one another’s actions is impressive by anyone’s standards. Some of these hotshots enjoy the extremes of flight capable with current technology and are known to push the limits of their machines even if they’re only running freight. Ravens in particular have a reputation for being among the fastest and most capable—if not the gentlest—pilots.

HYPERCORP GENERAL ASSOCIATE

“Management would like to see this matter resolved quickly, with a minimum of fuss.”

Sometimes the Acquisitions Department needs some extra staff to assist with a collection, or R&D misplaced something. Perhaps a rival hypercorp has gotten wind of Marketing’s new unreleased advertisement, or some anarcho-syndicalists are attempting to unionize the workers again. These things can all slow the pace of business, and solutions-oriented people are needed to prevent that.

General associates operate across divisions and work groups to smooth over difficulties. They see to it that internal memoranda stay just that and the viral marketers don’t have to be disturbed to execute any serious spin. Fixers like this will rarely get their own hands dirty—despite being there to clean up other peoples’ messes, they’ll outsource the heavy lifting to “temps” who can’t be traced back to the company.

IDENTITY THIEF

Identity thieves take advantage of the fact that people’s looks often change, using the hacked details of people’s lives to impersonate moderately successful individuals, fleecing them and otherwise wreaking havoc before moving on. The really good ID thieves go so far as to steal their target’s current looks as well. These imposters hide their own activities and identities carefully, often layered behind several shell personas, and even leaving behind forks to carry on a scam and draw attention while they move on to the next mark.

IMMORTAL OLIGARCH

“I am not impressed.”

The true leaders of the inner system, immortal oligarchs have been around for well over a century, shepherding their financial empires through the expansion into space and the Fall. They have withstood numerous economic and political crises and even threats and equity battles from within their own boardrooms and families, all the while sipping real BF scotches, having sex with XP stars, and negotiating with Factor proxies. They are jaded, self-assured, and supremely aware of their own, and their foes’, capabilities—which makes life boring. Many pursue strange and even self-destructive side projects with criminal cartels, gatecrashing expeditions, experimental science, TITANS-related research, and similar dangerous paths as a way to pass the time. Limitless wealth, plausible deniability, and the media are an oligarch’s best friends. Their plans are typically elaborate, long-term, and incorporate contingencies that most people would never even consider. Their idiosyncracies and outright madness know no bounds, as they have the influence to make everyone and everything around them conform to their will. They cannot help but act with patronizing bemusement, even if caught or confronted. They know that time and resources are on their side, and their vengeance has a very long reach.

INDENTURED INFUGEE

"I'm finished, madame."

A typical infugee, freshly instantiated into an owned sleeve, is not yet at home in their new time or society, but still retains knowledge, skills, and memories from their earlier life. They may in fact possess highly specialized knowledge or memories that could shed light on mysteries the PCs otherwise might not be able to crack.

“By Jove!”

MERCURIAL SEPARATIST

**Shifts colors to blue and rhythmically curls and uncurls every other limb**

A growing number of mercurials are pushing to establish autonomous habitats, arguing that the social norms and values of most transhumans don't provide social structures that are comfortable for their behavioral patterns. Separatists are the ones at the forefront of this movement, calling for action publicly and engaging in covert action against the societies and organizations opposed to greater freedoms for non-human sentients.

“Quit playing and just space the kid already, I need you to help me get this back to the ship.”

Pirates prey on isolated habitats, long-haul shipping vessels, and small prospecting stations. Semi-permanent freebooter stations can be found hidden throughout the asteroid belt and in other fringe areas of the system. Pirate crews also include salvage operation specialists (use Vacworker stats) and a pilot. Pirate ships are often old, with numerous clubbed-together repairs and homebrew mods. Standard transports and couriers are common. Many pirates latch onto roving black market scum barge swarms, roving ahead and behind to pick off isolated targets.

PSYCHOSURGEON

“Impatient much? That’s a personality defect I can easily fix for you.”

The ethical oversight of psychosurgery is one of the most hotly-contested socio-scientific issues. Many important treatment programs for people with severe personality disorders depend on psychosurgery, as do a number of brutal punishments and tortures. Governmental and military use of psychosurgery encompasses everything from recovery for people suffering PTSD to invasive interrogation techniques. To the public, elective psychosurgery is available to those who wish to add, remove, or change elements of their personality—even if it fundamentally alters who they are as a person.

“We’re going back. There’s no stopping us.”

Reclaimers are dedicated to breaking the interdiction of Earth, wiping out the TITAN remnants there, and terraforming the planet so that it may be transhumanity’s homeworld once again. While many agitate for their cause in the legal and political spheres of the inner system, others are actively seeking to establish basecamps on Earth and investigating potential methods for terraforming. Needless to say, this is dangerous work, and many die at the hands of the killsat defense grid or TITAN relics.

Many military organizations, governments, and hypercorps continue to keep scientists on hand who are experts at analyzing and teasing apart the relics of the TITANs. ## SCUM DEALER

"Petals, skillz, XPorn, or smokes, I got it."

Scum dealers can be found pushing anything, anywhere, as long as it sells on the black or gray markets. Drugs and XP are common specialties, though well-connected dealers may also deal in nano, weapons, egos, or morphs, or even hire people to record their own XP.

SECURITY JAMMER

"Mess with that airlock and I'll have two dozen sebots crawling all over you in seconds."

Security jammers look after the technological safety of habitats and stations. While digital security is left to security hackers and AIs, security jammers enhance the physical security provided by troopers and other personnel with fine control over the station's defense systems and bots. Security jammers keep a close watch on a habitat's exterior/hull and access points while scanning incoming targets and monitoring any internal security alerts. If a situation arises, the jammer can coordinate the security response, close and open doors, shut off lights, change life support and environmental settings, modify a station's AR outputs, and, of course, direct the actions of squadrons of bots via remote control or direct jamming.

SECURITY TROOPER

“Access code and ID.”

Typical security troopers are low-rez recruits assigned to military, police, or security details. They might be a generic military draftee, an inner-system beat cop, a hypercorp hired guard, a cheAP Extropian security contractor, or an autonomist mutual-aid security volunteer.

SECURITY DOG

Partially-uplifted smart dogs are commonly used for security purposes, especially among the Martian hypercorps, as they're cheaper than troopers and don't form unions. They are managed by handlers, who use Trooper stats with an additional Animal Handling 45 (Smart Dogs 55) skill.

SINGULARITY SEEKER

“We still have so many limitations. I've found a way to move past them.”

Singularity seekers can be found in advanced research facilities, archaeological sites, gatecrashing teams, or poking around anywhere they think they might latch on to something that will let them move beyond the current options offered by transhuman existence. They are dangerous because they actively pursue a fundamental change in the nature of their being and consciousness that is understandable only to them, and are not afraid to follow the footsteps of the TITANs to achieve their goals.

SMART ANIMAL HANDLER

"It's ok, they're very friendly."

While many animal handlers hold legitimate jobs training and working with smart animals of various persuasions, some are also involved in criminal activities, using their menageries as informants, pickpockets, and lookouts.

TECH SUPPORT

"The AR interface just spazzed out—easy fix. What color do you want your replacement eyes to be?"

Even at the pinnacle of transhuman technical achievement, devices still need troubleshooting and maintenance. Whether it's malware on your muse or involuntary firing of a hand laser, tech support is there to help. With the omnipresence of high technology, tech support types are ubiquitous in all but the remotest regions.
